Annual Report

Letter from Nabeek & Ruba

Dear Friends and Partners,

This past year invited us to remain attentive to the quiet ways God moves among His people. Much of what shaped our work did not happen through visible breakthroughs, but through faithful presence, patient listening, and a shared willingness to trust God in the midst of unanswered questions.

We were reminded often that ministry is, at its heart, about walking with others. We met women and youth in seasons of searching, leaders learning to carry responsibility with wisdom, and communities longing for spaces marked by dignity and truth. In these encounters, we saw God gently forming hearts, restoring confidence, and awakening a deeper sense of purpose.

God's word tells us, "Let us not grow weary of doing good, for at the proper time we will reap a harvest if we do not give up" (Galatians 6:9). This verse became a quiet anchor for us throughout the year. It encouraged us to remain steadfast, even when progress felt slow, trusting that God is always at work beyond what we can see.

Through discipleship journeys, leadership initiatives, and community engagement, we witnessed growth that was sincere and lasting. Conversations became more honest. Commitments became deeper. Individuals began to lead not from ambition, but from a place of calling and integrity. These moments affirmed that transformation unfolds best where faith, care, and consistency meet.

As an organization, this season also called us to greater attentiveness. We strengthened the foundations of our work, seeking wisdom in how we steward relationships, resources, and responsibility. We sensed God inviting us to move forward with clarity and humility, rooted in the mission He has entrusted to us. We remain deeply grateful for you. Your prayers, generosity, and partnership are woven into every story represented in this report. You stand with us not only in what is visible, but in the unseen faithfulness that sustains this ministry day by day.

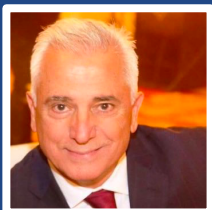

As we look ahead, we do so with calm confidence, trusting the Lord who promises, "The one who calls you is faithful, and He will do it" (1 Thessalonians 5:24). May this report encourage you, and may you be reminded that together, we continue to sow seeds of hope, healing, and renewal.

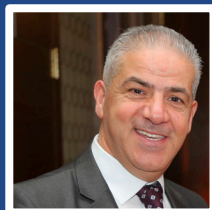

With sincere gratitude and prayer,
Nabeek and Ruba

ACCTS

Vision

Our vision is to see the Arab community living in peace and harmony while empowered in spirit, soul, and body.

ACCTS

Mission

- Reinforce intellectual freedom and acceptance of others in society.
- Develop individuals in spirit, soul, and body to participate in building the community.
- Empower men, women, and youth to identify their personal, spiritual, and social needs; adopt the truth about themselves; and equip them to pursue change in their lives and influence others.
- Prepare a genuine Christian generation who are loyal, aware, and educated about their rights and duties so they can be active in facing their homeland's social challenges positively.

Channels

ACCTS employs a diverse range of tools to fulfill its vision and mission. In 2025, the organization actively engaged in the following methods:

ACCTS Programs

ACCTS runs two main programs, Arab Woman Today, designed for women aged 21-45, and the Youth Ministry, aimed at youth aged 18-35. Our target audience is diverse, including Arab individuals from various religious backgrounds and educational levels across the Middle East and North Africa. Each program offers two streams: one specifically for Christians and one for the broader community, both grounded in Christian-based values.

A Year of Milestones

*"Now to Him who is able to do immeasurably more than all we ask or imagine..."
(Ephesians 3:20)*

In 2025, we witnessed God advancing His work in quiet but undeniable ways, expanding reach, deepening discipleship, and opening doors we could not have planned. We are deeply grateful for our faithful team, the people the Lord has placed and used, serving with humility, excellence, and perseverance across every program and platform. As we marked 25 years of ministry last year, we did so with renewed responsibility, seeing healing where pain was greatest, courageous decisions for Christ, and steady spiritual growth across the region. This year was shaped by new partnerships, strengthened local churches, and wiser systems to steward rising needs:

1. AI for deeper care at greater scale

As more women and young adults reached out with complex needs, including faith questions, strained relationships, self-image struggles, and personal crises, we integrated Theosumma, our AI support tool, across Facebook Messenger and Instagram direct messages. Theosumma offers an initial, compassionate response that helps individuals feel seen, gently clarifies their needs, and provides thoughtful guidance at a first level of care. It remains available to support and accompany them until a situation requires deeper, more personal engagement. When conversations become more sensitive, complex, or emotionally demanding, our trained counselors step in to provide attentive, human-centered dialogue and ongoing support. This approach strengthened our ability to respond with greater speed and discernment while protecting the depth and integrity of care. In 2025, 3,176 women and youth received personalized support, and many encountered the Gospel through these one-on-one interactions.

2. Cross-border discipleship and new local presence

God opened doors to reach new countries and contexts for the Youth Ministry this year, expanding into Mafrag, a community shaped by long-term refugee realities, and partnering with churches and ministries in Syria to strengthen evangelism and multiply disciples. Across Mafrag, Amman, Zarqa, Karak, Irbid, and Jaramana, 94 on-ground sessions reached 664 participants from different realities.

3. Compassion in crisis: standing with Gaza

In the midst of war and deep trauma, we remained present with Christ-centered care, offering women a steady, safe space for prayer, listening, and healing when support systems were scarce. 22 women received care through one-on-one counseling and group support, totaling 138 hours of counseling and prayer.

4. Empowering the Church

Through church-based visits, workshops, and training, we supported congregations to disciple more intentionally and care more holistically. We also helped a church in Amman establish a women's ministry gathering, creating a sustainable space for discipleship and growth.

5. Publications that multiply impact

We released two new books that carry our mission beyond events and into homes and churches:

Biblical Reflections in a Middle Eastern Context: a collection prepared through ACCTS, offering Scripture-rooted devotionals shaped by the Middle East's cultural and historical realities, helping readers connect God's Word to everyday life, challenges, and hope in the region.

Her Story, His Glory (30 Women Transformed): thirty stories from women impacted by AWT from 1999 until today affirming that when a woman is healed and restored, her whole world begins to change.

Called for Such a Time (The Restoration of Youth): a resource that strengthens youth and church leaders through stories of calling, renewal, and Christ-centered growth; designed to inspire, equip, and multiply discipleship.

"Her Story, His Glory", and "Called for Such a Time" publications are available to download through the website.

To God's glory, these milestones are only part of what He did in 2025. Many other stories, breakthroughs, and quiet acts of transformation unfolded across our programs and platforms. We invite you to read the full Annual Report to see the wider picture and the lives behind the numbers, as we continue to witness the Lord "do immeasurably more than all we ask or imagine... according to His power that is at work within us." (Ephesians 3:20)

Highlights

Trainings and Workshops Summary

Healing Where Pain Is Greatest: AWT Trauma Healing

Rooted in God's heart to bind up the brokenhearted and bring comfort to those who mourn (Isaiah 61:1-3), AWT's trauma-healing program creates safe, Christ-centered spaces where women can bring hidden wounds into the light, receive support, and take practical steps toward restoration. In 2025, we intentionally focused on reaching women in underserved areas and communities carrying the heaviest burdens, and across this track, 195 women experienced healing, each from a specific pain.

1. This year, AWT conducted three trauma-healing training rounds, targeting three groups of women living under difficult realities. Women came from churches across the northern cities in Jordan, from Lebanon (Beirut and beyond) where war realities and severe economic hardship continue to deepen trauma, and from Karak in South Jordan, where access to safe healing spaces is often limited. Across these rounds, women walked through a structured healing journey that helped them name pain, process loss, rebuild inner strength, and respond with faith and wisdom; and 15 women also took next steps toward becoming trauma facilitators, so healing can multiply through homes, churches, and communities. As one participant shared, "I felt safe enough to be honest with myself, and that honesty led to healing. I'm grateful for every moment, and I know this journey is still unfolding." Thurayya from Lebanon

 I came to this training feeling broken; mentally, physically, and emotionally exhausted. I didn't know what healing could look like. But through the sessions, I experienced holistic restoration. I felt seen, heard, and embraced. For the first time in a long time, I believe I can start over. I'm leaving this space with strength I didn't know I had, and a heart that's ready to hope again. Einas from Jordan.

2. Online Workshop: “Faith in Times of Adversity”

To reach women beyond geography, we hosted an online workshop on sexual abuse and restoring dignity, grounded in Tamar’s story (2 Samuel 13). Participants saw how Scripture names evil truthfully, protects the dignity of the wounded, and calls for compassion and justice, while gaining practical guidance to break harmful silence, reject victim-blaming, respond with wise support, and walk with survivors toward safety, healing, and restored identity in Christ.

3. Workshop for Mothers of Children with Disabilities

We also held a specialized workshop for mothers and caregivers, recognizing the unique weight they carry; grief, guilt, fear for the future, and exhaustion, and offering emotional tools, faith-based encouragement, and a supportive community. One mother reflected: “You gave us a safe space to express our thoughts and emotions, especially our pain and sadness. Thank you for validating our feelings and equipping us with tools to face them, rather than ignore them.”

Discipleship: Women Rooted and Built Up

Built on the call “to make ready a people prepared for the Lord” (Luke 1:17), our discipleship track this year was designed to be more than teaching; it was formation, shaping women’s inner life with Christ so their homes, choices, and relationships increasingly reflect His Kingdom. Across 4 discipleship trainings and 4 online workshops, 187 women benefited; meeting God in the practical places where obedience is hardest and growth becomes visible.

1. Collaboration (Small Circle) – One-on-one discipleship

This training addressed what many churches feel is missing: discipleship that happens life-to-life, not only lesson-to-group. Women explored Jesus’ one-on-one model, why personal relationships are central to growth, and how to move from “church activities” to intentional mentoring that produces lasting fruit.

2. Self-Discipline

Here, discipleship became a daily lifestyle: women identified where discipline breaks down (time, emotions, responsibilities) and rebuilt consistency as Spirit-led choices, not mood-based living. With practical tools (prayer, Scripture, fasting, solitude) and examples from Joseph, Hannah, and Ruth, many left with clear action steps, creating schedules and plans to live what they learned.

3. Enlightening the Eyes of the Mind

As AWT continues expanding service across denominations, we were honored to speak at the Episcopal Church conference; a meaningful milestone in our ministry journey. This space sought awakening, not information: through three sessions, women learned to bring Scripture into daily life, took courageous steps toward forgiveness, and gained tools to navigate relationships with wisdom and love. For many, it was their first true encounter with the message of salvation, and several responded with heartfelt prayers of faith.

 “When you spoke about healthy relationships, especially within my family, I felt immediate conviction and inner reconciliation... It felt like a sickness in me was healed.”

4. House Built on the Rock

Arab Woman Today is committed to holistic discipleship; and for the first time, we intentionally invited husbands to join a marriage-focused training that helps homes mature according to God's design. Over two training days, couples engaged in Scripture, gaining tools to strengthen communication, align priorities with biblical values, challenge limiting beliefs, and practice forgiveness. This wasn't theory; it was discipleship applied to the most sensitive arena, the home, translating the Word into "how we talk," "how we decide," and "how we heal."

After 12 years of marriage, this training helped us realign our relationship and return to a firm foundation. It's a true blessing to have a Christ-centered ministry that covers women and families with guidance, support, and practical tools, helping us stay on the right path.

A Church Where There Was None: Discipling Women Beyond Borders

For many women, access to a local church is limited by security risks, social rejection, and an unaccepting environment toward their faith; where attending can bring pressure, isolation, or harm. In response, we provide an Online Church program for these women, offering the fellowship and discipleship they often lack. Launched in 2024, AWT's Online Church has grown into a steady community, reaching 70+ women who attend regularly; in 2025, women gathered for 13 sessions to worship, study Scripture, and receive biblical nourishment across 12 countries, and as Marina shared, "The messages I hear in this Online Church, I don't hear anywhere else." We will continue the Online Church through 2026, reaching even more women who cannot safely access a local fellowship.

The Chosen Branch

Building on what God has been doing online, we met the women in person for the second time in Turkey through "The Chosen Branch" conference, where 20 women attended the training. For many, it was their first Christian conference in person; as one woman shared, "It was such a great joy to pray together, worship together freely for the first time." Centered on John 15, the gathering called women to abide in Christ and bear lasting fruit; as one participant from Jordan testified, "The Lord took me into a new depth in my relationship with Him. I left with a renewed desire to abide in Christ and live with greater fruitfulness."

I learned to invite God into every detail of my life and plan with Him, not apart from Him. This safe space brought healing and reminded me, coming from a context where women are often undervalued, that I am precious in God's sight." A., Tunisia

Strengthening the Church from Within

AWT continued this year to stand alongside local congregations as a ministry partner, empowering women in the church to grow, serve, and lead. In 2025, church leaders invited our team to deliver five church-based workshops; each shaped by the church's needs and delivered across different locations in Jordan, serving over 350 women. In the North, we led two joint gatherings for women from five churches, welcoming both believers and seekers and encouraging women to live out their calling, use their spiritual gifts, and share Christ with confidence. In Zarqa, we delivered two sermons for women carrying heavy family and financial burdens.

A key highlight was supporting the launch of a women's ministry in a local church in Amman. After the church reached out, AWT mentored the leader to clarify the ministry direction, set objectives, form a committed team, and develop the program plan and materials, leading to the church's first women's gathering facilitated by AWT.

Baptist Women Leaders Breakfast

Many pastors' wives and women leaders serve faithfully while carrying heavy emotional and spiritual burdens with little space to be cared for themselves. Because many lack a reliable support system, we are intentionally building a safe circle where they can be strengthened through fellowship, prayer, and ongoing encouragement.

For the second year in a row, we hosted a breakfast gathering for Baptist women leaders and pastors' wives, a warm space for fellowship, prayer, and encouragement, reminding women that God has long used women to build His Church and continues to do so today. We also affirmed that AWT remains committed to walking alongside them with ongoing support whenever needed.

"For the past 10 years, AWT has consistently stood with me personally and with the women in our church. They have trained and discipled us, and they have provided counseling for women whenever needed, always with readiness and care."

My Wellbeing: Caring for the Woman God Sees

For many women, “personal wellbeing” can sound like a luxury, where survival comes first and a woman’s needs often come last. Through AWT’s My Wellbeing Program, AWT created a space where women from all backgrounds and countries could pause, breathe, and rebuild from the inside out. Through one training and four workshops, 150 women were equipped with renewed perspective to care for themselves with dignity, make healthier choices, and carry their responsibilities from a stronger, steadier place.

1. My Wellbeing - Pilot Training

In 2025, AWT developed and piloted an in-house wellbeing curriculum, a practical, Christ-centered guide for everyday life. It gives women clear language and tools to navigate stress and emotions, set healthy boundaries, strengthen identity, and build life-giving rhythms of rest and relationships. The pilot also enabled us to refine the content and begin forming a core team of future trainers, preparing for full rollout in 2026.

2. Four workshops that reached women across communities

Across four workshops, AWT met women where they are, online and in-person, bringing practical tools and hope into real life:

Marka community session: A session with women living under heavy family and life pressures, focused on understanding personality differences, navigating conflict, and building healthier communication at home.

Al-Yadouda community visit: A gathering that honored women through connection and crafts, then moved into a focused conversation on family peace and forgiveness helping women name tensions at home, reflect on what fuels conflict, and explore practical, faith-rooted steps toward healthier responses, restored relationships, and a more peaceful atmosphere in the family.

Moments like these are rare and priceless, when we feel truly seen, cherished, and honored. Your love has wrapped around us like a warm embrace, reminding us of our worth.

Women’s health & nutrition (online): A practical session on sustainable dieting, stress-related eating, and long-term lifestyle habits.

The Menopause Journey (online): An expert-led session that addressed misconceptions and gave women clear medical understanding and coping strategies; reaching many new participants across the region.

3. Four Digital Campaigns Advancing Women's Wellbeing and Dignity

Across these four campaigns, AWT shared 161 resources to strengthen women's wellbeing, safety, and sense of God-given worth.

"Seen & Called"

(International Women's Day Campaign)

AWT honored women's worth, voice, and God-given calling—especially those who feel unseen or overwhelmed. The campaign highlighted resilience and offered faith-rooted encouragement for everyday life. It reminded women they are not defined by pressure or pain, but by God-given dignity.

"Safe is Sacred"

(Ending Violence Against Women Campaign)

AWT confronted violence against women with courage and compassion, helping women recognize harmful patterns and resist the normalization of abuse. The campaign encouraged safer choices and seeking support, reinforcing that violence is never God's design. Every woman deserves safety, respect, and the opportunity to heal.

"You Are Not Alone in This Season"

(Menopause Awareness)

AWT opened a safe conversation—replacing myths with clarity and shame with dignity. Women learned what changes are normal, how to respond wisely, and when to seek medical support. The campaign affirmed this transition is not an ending, but a season women can walk through with strength.

"Early Care is an Act of Courage"

(Cancer Awareness)

AWT met women where fear often keeps them silent, moving them toward knowledge, screening, and early action. Women were encouraged to recognize warning signs and prioritize check-ups without delay. The message carried hope: her life is precious, and she does not have to face this alone.

AWT Women's Economic Empowerment

Women are living under harsh realities where the desire to work is often met with closed doors. Limited job opportunities, the cost of transportation and childcare, and social and family constraints make regular employment unrealistic for many. As living costs rise, this gap leaves women carrying heavy pressure, with few safe, flexible ways to provide.

AWT's economic empowerment program responds by helping women build real alternatives: generating income through home-based work, strengthening employability, and making confident, informed decisions about their future. Through three trainings and one workshop, 109 women were economically empowered to make firm, informed decisions about their work and future, whether by generating income through home-based initiatives or by pursuing a clearer career direction.

1. "From an Idea to Entrepreneurship"

Women with home-based businesses often begin with a strong idea, but without a clear business approach, their efforts stay scattered and income remains unstable. Through two rounds of entrepreneurship training, women moved from uncertainty to clarity and action. Instead of "just trying," many began making informed decisions, defining their customer, strengthening their offer, and pricing with confidence. For several, the shift was immediate: improving what they provide, strengthening customer experience, and showing up more consistently, turning home-based work into a more stable pathway toward financial resilience.

2. "How to Build My Career Path?"

This workshop helped women move from confusion to direction, identifying strengths, exploring realistic options, and leaving with practical next steps. One participant called it a "gate" to discovering herself, as anxiety was replaced with purpose.

3. "Be Aware of Your Rights"

Women gained confidence to understand their workplace rights, recognize unfair practices, and make safer decisions about contracts, benefits, and work conditions, reducing vulnerability and strengthening self-advocacy.

"I am one of the very first female plumbers in Jordan. I thought my business was going well, but I realized it was random. This training gave me a clear path forward, and I'm now confident in expanding my business."

Sustainable Leadership for Jordan's Future

ACCTS-AWT's political empowerment program equips emerging leaders to engage ethically and influence decision-making with integrity, even beyond formal titles.

Through the Sustainable Leadership Training, 31 participants, including parliament members, youth sector leaders, activists, and community volunteers, gained practical tools for public engagement. The training sharpened self-awareness, communication, and values-based decision-making, helping participants turn convictions into consistent action under pressure.

The program was further strengthened by the presence and contribution of official guests, including a representative from SGP (a political party in the Netherlands), along with political and other official figures who attended selected sessions, offered insights from the field, and affirmed the importance of ethical leadership and accountable public service.

"This training helped solidify ideas I've been grappling with. I now know how to transfer values into action. I'm already working to implement these insights in my role with youth in my governorate." Youth Sector Leader

ARAB WOMAN TODAY MEDIA Ministry

Reaching Women Across the Arab World

God has been using AWT's media ministry to carry hope where it's needed most; bringing healing, reconciliation, spiritual growth, disciple-making, and the Gospel to women across the Arab world. In 2025, our social media content reached 11 million people with an exceptional 18% engagement rate. Through our website, over 24,000 women visited and benefited from the resources we published.

Stories That Speak to Real Life and Discipleship That Goes Deeper

Our podcast ministry also grew significantly in 2025, reaching more than 5 million views. Through Karamah, we engaged women on everyday community and life topics such as entrepreneurship, women's role in politics, menopause, and major life transitions.

Through our Christian channel DAW, we addressed discipleship and inner restoration through themes like women after God's heart, "it's not your fault" for survivors of abuse, caring for the elderly, and building a Godly marriage.

Beyond the Screen: Counseling, Personal Support and Gospel Response

This is not surface-level engagement. Our goal is to meet women where they are, listen well, and offer the truth of Christ and His healing. In 2025, 1,968 women reached out privately and received personalized support on sensitive relational and personal struggles, often carrying a broken self-image, fractured relationships, or uncertainty about their faith. Through these media pathways, we shared the Gospel with 91 women, and 21 clearly declared their faith in Jesus Christ. In addition, 98 women received long-term counseling through 398 hours of counseling support.

"I first reached out with a simple message, quietly breaking inside after years of violence at home. I felt worthless, and the thought of ending my life had become a real temptation. In counseling, I was given space to speak without fear, and I was guided step by step to face those thoughts, say no to abuse, and believe again that my life has value. For the first time, I understood: God loves me, and my pain does not define me."

Hiba from Lebanon (Read her full story below.)

Counseling Support for Women in Gaza

In the midst of a devastating war; where fear, displacement, grief, and daily uncertainty have become constant; women in Gaza are carrying an overwhelming emotional and spiritual burden. We tried countless times to reach and support them, often facing closed doors and broken lines of communication. By God's grace, two long-time friends of our ministry helped us reconnect with women in Gaza and opened a path for sustained care.

Through this connection, AWT established two support groups: one on the ground, where we facilitated a counselor based in Bethlehem to provide in-person support to women in Gaza, and another online, where our AWT counselor offered ongoing counsel, prayer, and follow-up.

In total, 22 women received support through 138 hours of counseling and prayer, standing with them in their trauma, strengthening their faith, and reminding them they are not alone.

The Story of Hiba

Transformed

Through AWT, I met Jesus, the One who turns brokenness into hope.

For as long as I can remember, my life was filled with pain. At home, I faced constant violence; my father and brother once beat me so severely I thought I would die, and my mother encouraged them. I felt worthless, broken, and completely alone. Depression consumed me, and fear shadowed every moment. I lost trust in myself, and the thought of ending my life became a dark escape. I even questioned God, wondering why He allowed so much suffering in my life.

When I first began counseling with AWT, I was crushed physically, emotionally, and spiritually. I had no work, no income, and no freedom to continue my education. My family refused to support me and denied me the chance to study or earn my own living. My world was full of despair, and I couldn't see a way forward. The pain from the beatings left me not only bruised on the outside, but shattered on the inside. I arrived at my first session with almost no trust in myself, convinced that my life had no worth and no future.

But in those sessions, something began to change. My counselor gave me space to pour out my pain and fears without judgment. She listened with patience and compassion, helping me release years of fear, anger, and hopelessness. She taught me how to face the suicidal thoughts that haunted me and encouraged me to call her whenever I felt close to harming myself. She guided me to recognize my challenges and break them down, teaching me small steps to handle them rather than being crushed under their weight. For the first time, I began to sense that I was not completely powerless.

Slowly, I began to see that I had strengths inside me that I had never recognized before. Through AWT counseling, I discovered that I could express my feelings instead of hiding them, that I could say no to abuse, and that I had the right to protect myself. My counselor helped me build skills to face moments of fear, to calm my anxious thoughts, and to believe that I was capable of more than just surviving. She even referred me to a doctor who could help me manage the deep depression and physical symptoms I carried from years of trauma.

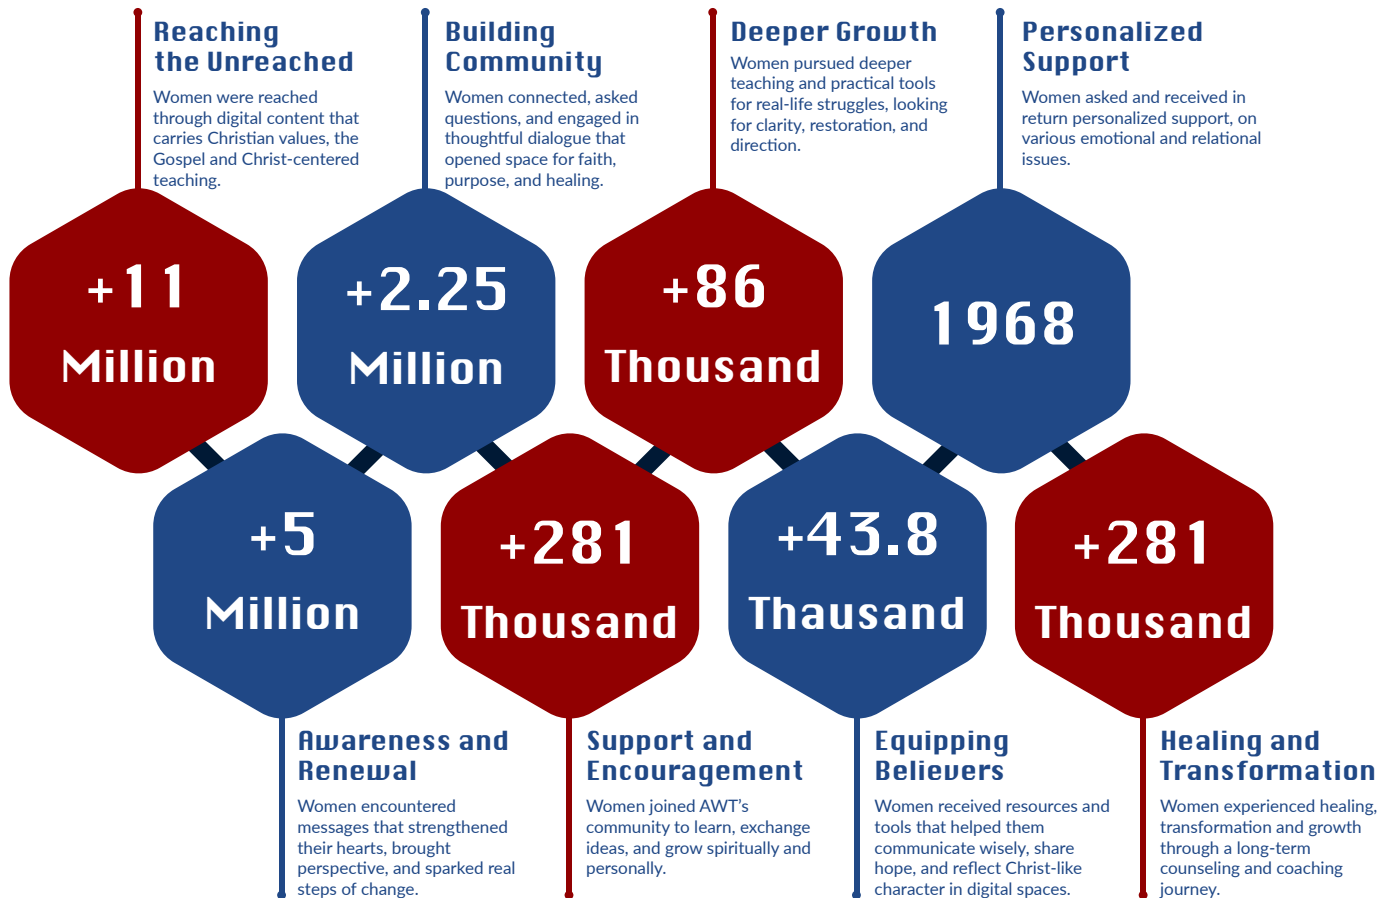

It was also through AWT that I began to encounter Jesus in a real and personal way. In the midst of my darkness, I slowly realized something I had never believed before: God loves me. Not for what I could do, not for what I deserved, but simply because I am His. I began to understand that my life has value in His eyes, that my pain does not define me, and that even in the deepest suffering, God gives hope. This truth changed everything. I could see that I was not abandoned, that there was a future for me, even if I could not see it yet. I started to believe that He had a purpose for my life, a life beyond despair.

Week by week, I felt freedom. Painful memories began to lose some of their power over me, and I started experiencing peace in my heart. I learned to recognize and challenge negative thoughts, to face my fears with courage, and to rebuild my confidence step by step. I was no longer the girl who wanted only to die. I had found hope, purpose, and the assurance that God was walking with me every step.

Today, I continue to grow, receiving counseling and support to help me overcome depression and fear. But I am no longer trapped by my past. Through AWT, I met Jesus, the One who gives strength when I am weak, courage when I am afraid, and joy when I have forgotten what it felt like. I now believe that my life has meaning, that I am loved and valued by God, and that one day I can help others find the same freedom and hope I have discovered.

Youth Ministry - Program Highlights

Trainings and Workshops Summary

This year, The Youth Ministry met young people where life is actually happening, and we saw significant growth in both reach and engagement. Across Mafraq, Amman, Zarqa, and Jaramana, we delivered 94 on-ground training sessions reaching 644 participants from Jordan, Syria, Lebanon, Iraq, Egypt, and Sudan. Each gathering formed part of one integrated journey across four areas: spiritual growth, emotional wellbeing, intellectual formation, and economic and life skills, equipping youth to live with depth, make wise choices, and serve as steady leaders in their churches and communities.

Growing in Christ, Multiplying Disciples

“Grow in the grace and knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.” (2 Peter 3:18)

The Youth Ministry discipled young believers to grow in Christ and become steady leaders and disciple-makers in their churches and communities, grounded in Scripture and shaped by Christlike character. In 2025, we delivered three training programs, two workshops, and one annual conference, reaching 173 participants, with every activity aligned toward growth in grace and maturity in Christ.

Crossing Borders with the Gospel

This year began with a milestone: two training sessions on Evangelism and Multiplying Disciples in Syria (Jaramana, Damascus), a moment of “going” in the spirit of the Great Commission (Matthew 28:19). In a setting marked by war fatigue, economic hardship, and deep need, youth and church leaders gathered to return to the core of the message and the mission: what the Gospel is, why it matters, and how to share it with love, clarity, and courage.

“Before these training sessions, I thought evangelism was mainly about having the right words. But I discovered it starts with the Gospel itself and a heart that glorifies God. I now understand more clearly what Christ did for me on the cross, and I learned to share the message as it is, giving space for God Himself to speak through it. I used to fear my limited knowledge, but today I feel equipped to witness with love, clarity, and courage, and to disciple others with purposeful influence, not control.”
Youth Leader, Damascus

That same line of formation continued in Jordan through the Christian Leadership training, where participants were equipped to carry the Gospel faithfully, disciple others intentionally, and live as witnesses in everyday life. As testimonies captured it: “I learned to present the Gospel as it is, giving space for God Himself to speak through it,” and “I often fear my limited knowledge, but now I feel more able to share faithfully and clearly.”

When Calling Becomes a Compass

In the Calling workshop, youth paused long enough to ask the deeper questions: What is God inviting me into, and how do I live a life that is spiritually grounded and whole (John 10:10; 3 John 1:2)? Participants left with clearer direction and practical steps. “This training empowered me to set SMART goals and find balance,” one shared. Another said, “I came to discover my goal... and now I’m motivated to take serious action.” Even reluctant participants found a turning point: “I’m so glad I came... now I’m determined to understand myself and move forward.”

Faith in a Multi-Voice World

As youth navigate university life and online spaces full of competing ideas, local churches often see the questions and pressures first. In response to these needs, The Youth Ministry partnered with a local Baptist Church in Amman to host a Pluralism workshop that equipped youth to hold truth with humility and speak with grace (1 Peter 3:15).

“Meeting people from many backgrounds felt overwhelming at first, but this workshop gave me clarity, confidence, and practical tools to engage respectfully while staying rooted in faith.”

Ready Set Grow: The Annual Conference

“I press on toward the goal to win the prize for which God has called me heavenward in Christ Jesus.” (Philippians 3:14)

This verse set the tone for Ready Set Grow, The Youth Ministry’s eighth annual conference, where 58 young adults from Jordan, Egypt, and Syria gathered for three days not just to be encouraged, but to move forward. The conference invited participants to stop measuring themselves by the past, the crowd, or the pressure, and instead to fix their eyes on Christ and take the next faithful step. Sessions and discussions invited youth to wrestle with identity in Christ, renewed thinking, and disciplined growth, turning spiritual “desire” into a clear direction.

Many youth left with specific inner shifts. One shared, “One of the strongest lessons was to look at myself through God’s eyes, not the world’s.” Another said, “God opened my heart... I want to truly listen and carry others with compassion.” Others expressed it as a new posture toward life: “My past does not define me... I’m choosing to walk forward with Christ,” and “I want my life to reflect Christ everywhere I go.”

In interviews, youth described leaving with both motivation and tools: some spoke about becoming “ready” for the journey, others about moving from intention to a process God shapes, and others simply about choosing faithfulness in daily work while trusting God to bring lasting change.

“My past does not define me. I’m choosing to walk forward with Christ, leaving behind shame and old patterns, and fixing my eyes on the goal God has set for me. I want my identity to be rooted in Him, and my daily choices to reflect Him, even when it’s hard.” -Asil

Emotional Wellbeing and Peacebuilding

“Above all else, guard your heart, for everything you do flows from it.” (Proverbs 4:23)

At The Youth Ministry, emotional wellbeing is not secondary, it is foundational. The condition of the heart shapes behaviour, choices, and relationships, especially under pressure. As we listen closely to youth realities, we consistently see how stress, conflict, trauma, identity struggles, and relationship challenges impact daily life, especially in high-stress seasons like Mafrq and Zarqa.

We deliver this work through two complementary approaches: a Christian approach rooted in Scripture and discipleship, and a community-based approach grounded in Christian values, dignity, and healthy relationships. Across six training programs and four workshops, 201 participants strengthened resilience and relational skills, gaining practical tools to manage stress, handle conflict in healthier ways, set safe boundaries, and contribute to peace in their families and communities.

1. Building Belonging and Trust in Mafrq

Mafrq is a uniquely diverse context in northern Jordan, shaped by a long-term refugee presence alongside Jordanian host communities. Years of displacement, economic strain, and social pressure can leave hidden tensions, including misunderstandings across backgrounds and fragile trust. In response, The Youth Ministry delivered peacebuilding trainings that helped young adults move from tension to cooperation by exploring identity and true belonging, distinguishing conflict from violence, and understanding peacekeeping, peacemaking, and long-term peacebuilding, ending with practical personal commitments for healthier coexistence. Participants then strengthened real-life skills for dialogue and conflict transformation, including active listening, empathy, avoiding assumptions, and culturally sensitive communication, and learned to identify root causes so tension becomes an opportunity for growth rather than escalation. As one participant reflected, “It’s very important not to judge others; we shouldn’t judge just because someone is from a certain religion or nationality.”

“One of the most important things I learned was how to regulate myself and deal with stress and conflicts, how to be flexible, gentle, and balanced. Peace comes from the heart of each person and is not tied to external circumstances.”, Mohammad

2. Strengthening Emotional Resilience in Zarqa

In Zarqa, The Youth Ministry linked emotional maturity with community peace through two trainings. Participants explored emotions through a Christ-centered framework, connecting thoughts, feelings, and behaviour while practicing tools for awareness and self-regulation. With that base, they examined how trauma can shape reactions and relationships, and gained practical strategies for stress management, empathy, and trauma-informed communication. One participant reflected, “I will be honest with myself and my feelings, and not treat them as secondary, and I will deal with them in a healthy way,” while another shared, “Through this training, I realized I had traumas I wasn’t aware of, and it helped me start recognizing them.”

3. Resilience, Self-Leadership, and Healthy Connection

At the ACCTS Training Hall in Amman, The Youth Ministry delivered a connected set of trainings that strengthened youth wellbeing and relationships in clear, practical ways. Participants began by building emotional awareness and wiser responses through Emotional Wellbeing. Mindfulness then supported daily resilience, helping young adults slow down, refocus, and renew their thinking rather than living on autopilot.

As participants shared, “I want to start focusing on my lifestyle and leave the old one behind,” and “I need to renew my mind and fill my thoughts with the Word of God.” This foundation was reinforced through Self-Leadership and Self-Image, strengthening responsibility for habits and choices while rebuilding identity on truth and dignity, reducing comparison, shame, and emotional volatility. From there, the focus shifted to relational impact through Healthy Relationships and Boundaries, enabling youth to build emotionally safe connections and set limits with confidence and respect. As Bassel shared, “Before, I didn’t have clear markers for my boundaries, but now I have a clear structure I can build on.”

Intellectual Formation: Thinking Clearly, Leading Wisely, Engaging Responsibly

In a world of noise, polarization, and fast opinions, many young adults are hungry for something deeper: clear thinking, ethical discernment, and leadership anchored in conviction, not reaction. Through the intellectual focus area, The Youth Ministry created learning spaces where participants sharpened their minds, examined assumptions, and translated faith into wise decisions and responsible public engagement. Across three workshops, 66 participants strengthened their ability to think critically, lead responsibly, and engage society with wisdom and integrity.

Leadership Workshops: Decision Quality and Steady Influence

Two leadership workshops helped young adults reframe leadership as a title and embrace it as purposeful influence, clarifying what separates “being in charge” from leading well. Youth strengthened decision-making by learning to set direction, examine motives, prioritize what matters, and seek wise counsel, leading to more intentional choices and mature follow-through. This was deepened through Authentic Leadership, where participants translated values into daily practice through principle-based boundaries, healthier balance, and steady influence. As one participant shared, “What stayed with me the most was the idea of boundaries that are rooted in values and principles,” reflecting a shift toward leadership marked by integrity and clarity.

Political Participation Workshop: Faith, Citizenship, and the Common Good

Many young Christians feel politics is “not their space,” yet public life still shapes families, communities, and the vulnerable. In this workshop, young adults explored their role toward the state through a biblical lens, including submission versus obedience, honoring authorities without compromising God’s will, and choosing to be informed rather than disengaged. Participants set actionable goals and planned dialogue spaces that connect faith with public life.

As Asnat shared, “The session... opened our eyes to issues we hadn’t been exposed to before.”

From Pressure to Progress: Economic Skills that Strengthen Youth Stability

At The Youth Ministry, we don't deliver activities in isolation; we assess youth needs, listen to their realities, and respond with practical learning that helps them navigate life pressures with stability and confidence. Over the past years, one need has stood out clearly: youth are not short on ambition, but often short on the tools that protect their decisions. That is why, within our Community Program, we follow a strengthening pathway that moves from identity and character formation, to skills-building, to career direction, then employability readiness, followed by economic stability, and finally entrepreneurship; helping young adults "discover a sense of purpose and fulfillment through their careers."

Through four training programs and five practical workshops, we engaged 204 young adults, equipping them with skills they could apply immediately in their daily lives, family responsibilities, and future steps; delivered through professional, well-designed content by equipped trainers who combine expertise with an understanding of the youth context.

"I've attended many trainings with ACCTS, and I keep coming back because the quality is excellent. It's not just information, it reshapes the way you think. These trainings go deeper, addressing root causes, challenging mindsets, and turning learning into a personal experience that truly transforms you." Youwakeem

Skills & Competencies: The Foundation for Growth

This training strengthened the personal competencies that shape professional outcomes; self-awareness, adaptability, and daily habits that improve decision-making and relationships. One participant captured the experience in one line: "It wasn't just informative, it was transformative."

Communication Skills: Turning Ability into Influence

Because communication often determines whether skills succeed in real life, youth developed practical tools for listening, emotional intelligence, and navigating conflict. As Eliya reflected, the workshop had "a strong impact, awakening an awareness in us that we hadn't realized before."

Career Path Discovery: From Confusion to Direction

This workshop helped young adults move from feeling “stuck” to having clearer direction, connecting strengths and values with realistic opportunities and building a practical plan for next steps, priorities, and balance.

Employability Skills: From Applications to Opportunities

This training strengthened job-readiness and helped youth present themselves with greater confidence in the job market. Focused 1:1 coaching supported participants to turn what they learned into practical, personal next steps.

Financial Sustainability: Habits that Protect the Future

This session addressed the pressure of living month-to-month by building long-term stability habits, emergency planning, balanced spending, and consistent saving. A participant reflected the mindset shift: “I learned how to handle challenges and setbacks by turning them into opportunities for growth.”

Purpose-Driven Careers: Work with Meaning

Participants explored motivations, strengths, and purpose in work, so career decisions become intentional, not reactive. One participant shared: “I have learned to approach my work with optimism.” Another added: “The reflection exercises helped me think more deeply about my personal and professional growth.”

Budget Formulation: Turning Money into a Plan

Youth consistently shared that financial stress is not only about income, it’s often about unclear choices and the absence of a plan. This workshop equipped participants with a practical budgeting framework to set priorities, manage spending responsibly, and make confident everyday financial decisions.

Entrepreneurship Trainings: Building Something Sustainable

Entrepreneurship was framed as more than “starting a business”, it is building something responsible and lasting. Across two training programs, participants learned how to validate ideas, understand demand, price wisely, and develop a realistic roadmap. One participant shared: “I used to think having money and an idea was enough. Now I realize I need to study the market, build trust, and prepare for the unexpected.” Another added: “I will begin implementing what I learned, and will start my project with confidence.”

Evangelism through Sports

Evangelism through Football began in 2023 with a clear purpose: to reach young men in Zarqa, a city east of Amman—many from Christian backgrounds who have not been in church for years and often describe themselves as “not religious.” What started as weekly matches has grown into a consistent community of 109 men, gathering to play, compete, and build real fellowship. Within this trusted space, the game becomes a doorway for the Gospel: we set clear rules that reflect Christian character, integrity, respect, and self-control (including no cursing), and these values naturally open honest conversations about Christ and what a real relationship with Him looks like. For many, this has become a first step back toward faith, encountering Christian community not as a building or a label, but through friendship, consistency, and the message of grace.

Youth MEDIA Ministry

"You didn't just argue, you listened. You helped me see something I had never seen before. This conversation changed how I view Christianity." Ali

The Youth Media Ministry is a central pathway for reaching Arab-speaking youth across the Arab world and the diaspora, transforming screens into sacred spaces. Through social media, the Youth website, and podcasts, we engage young adults in meaningful ways, providing Christ-centered truth and guidance when many have no safe space to ask questions, explore faith, or wrestle with doubts. Our media platforms are not simply channels we use, rather they are core instruments of connection, dialogue, and transformation, where questions about belief, identity, purpose, and relationships are met with biblical clarity, practical tools, and a tone marked by respect, compassion, and hope.

In regions where cultural and social barriers limit public evangelism, digital media provides a discreet, accessible, and consistent means to engage hearts and minds. Many first arrive defensive or skeptical, challenging Christianity. Yet as trust develops, debate becomes discovery: young people share personal stories, revisit assumptions, and begin to see Jesus not as a distant concept but as a living hope.

This year alone, our digital outreach reached 6.3 million young adults, with nearly 19% actively engaging; responding, sharing, and showing genuine interest. For many, this was not just another post in a crowded feed, but a first encounter with Christ-centered teaching in a space where they felt safe enough to listen, question, and reflect. Beyond reach, we are forming community and sustaining discipleship: over 40,000 young adults now receive regular videos and resources, creating a consistent rhythm of learning, reflection, and spiritual formation that continues far beyond a single interaction.

And the fruit is personal, not just digital. Through this content, 1,208 young adults reached out for individualized support and received 580 hours of counseling and coaching, walking with them through faith questions, emotional struggles, and life decisions in a safe and confidential space. Many of these conversations begin with curiosity or skepticism, but over time grow into trust, honesty, and genuine spiritual searching.

One of them was Mwaffaq from Yemen, who first came with mockery and resistance. Yet as he encountered calm, Christ-centered dialogue, without pressure or performance, his tone shifted from confrontation to genuine seeking. Over time, he moved from sarcasm to honesty, admitting that much of what he believed was shaped by misinformation, and that this space helped him reconsider Christ with new eyes. His journey is a reminder that when someone is met with grace and truth, even a guarded heart can begin to open. (Read Mwaffaq's full story below.)

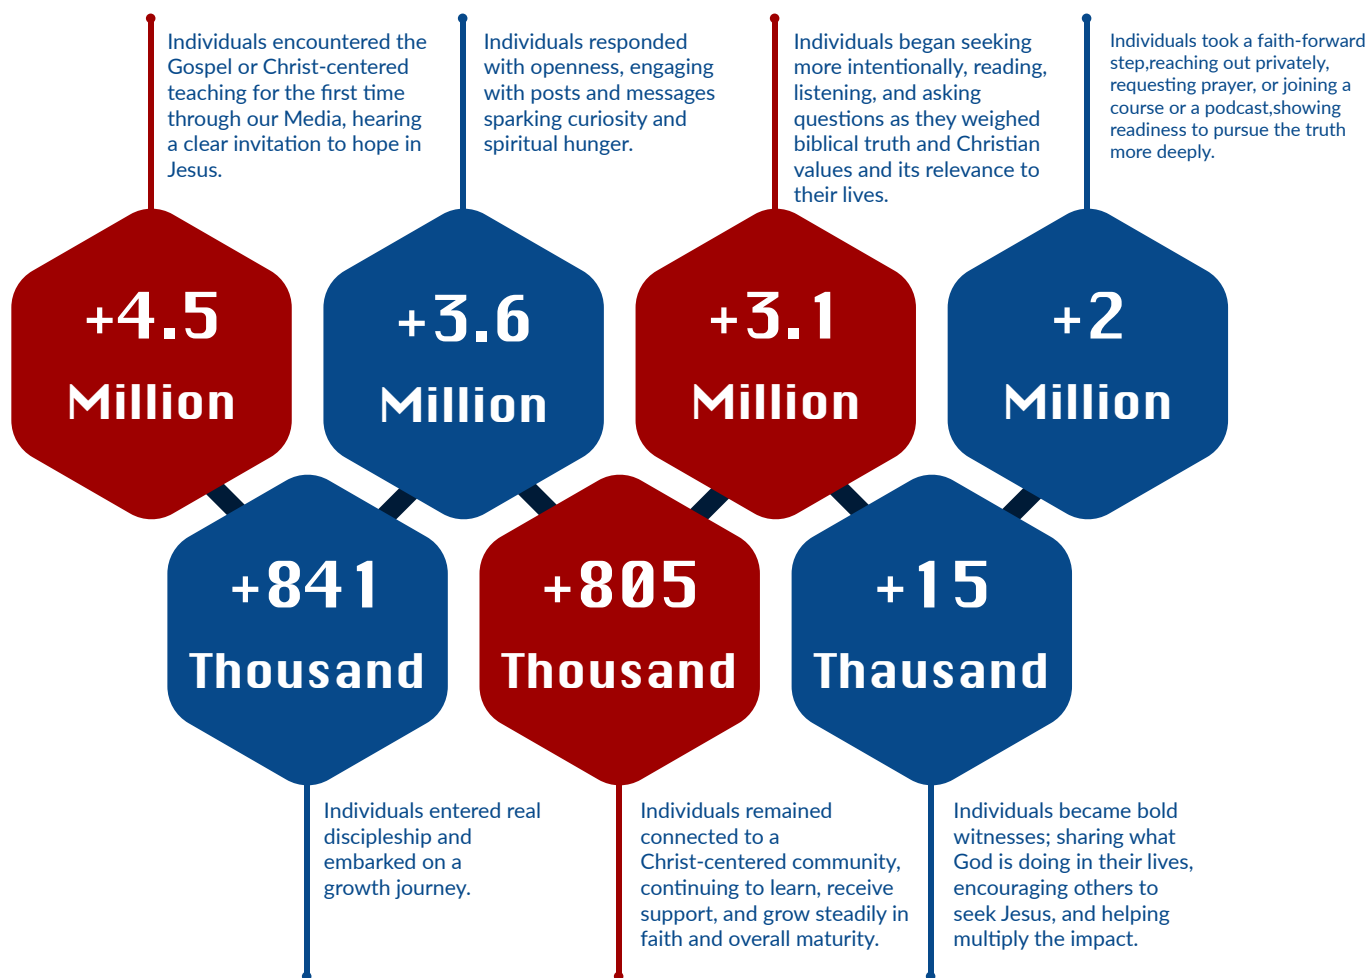

Research consistently shows that today's youth are growing up in a digital-first world, where screens have become the primary space for communication, learning, and social interaction. Many studies indicate that Gen Z spends several hours each day on smartphones and social platforms, with digital messaging often replacing in-person conversations.

For the Church and for ministries like ours, this reality is not a threat but a calling. If young people are spending their time in digital spaces, then those are the very spaces where we must be present with the message of hope. The screens that often isolate them can also become doors to community, discipleship, and transformation when the Gospel meets them there. Our digital outreach is not simply about numbers or platforms; it is about meeting young hearts where they are and guiding them toward deeper, life-giving relationships with Christ and with one another.

Podcast production has also become a strategic extension of this impact. This year, we launched our secular podcast channel and published 12 episodes; designed to move youth from surface-level thinking to deeper maturity. Through conversations on key life and culture themes shaping young adults today, and by welcoming experts in their fields as guests, the podcast served as a trusted space for growth and perspective. We are also grateful to have launched our Christian podcast channel, “Under Construction,” and we look forward to the meaningful impact it will continue to make as it grows;inviting youth into honest faith journeys and Christ-centered transformation.

The Story of Mwaffaq

From Yemen

A testimony of transformation through the love and care of The Youth Ministry Counseling

Yemen, a land of timeless beauty, now struggles under the weight of war, hunger, and relentless loss. Families live each day amid displacement and uncertainty, clinging to fragments of safety and hope. An undercurrent of extreme, blind fanaticism runs through society. Traditions of faith, honor, and family still anchor life; rigid beliefs that leave little room for questioning, compassion, or change. Many Yemeni men carry heavy burdens, their minds hardened by survival, mistrust, and the dogma surrounding them.

Yet beneath this armor, a quiet flicker of longing remains, a fragile yearning for hope, understanding, and truth. It is in this tension between fear, fanaticism, and hidden longing that stories like Mwaffaq's unfold, hearts once sealed by cynicism beginning, ever so subtly, to tremble toward possibility.

It began with a comment, sharp, sarcastic, and laced with mockery. Mwaffaq had stumbled across one of our posts on "Future Under Construction" and left behind a trail of caricatures: jabs at Christ, priests, and the Christian faith. It wasn't the kind of message that invited dialogue. But beneath the hostility, we sensed something else. Not rage. Not indifference. But a flicker of unrest. So we reached out, not to debate, but to offer a quiet space where truth could be explored without performance or pride.

At first, Mwaffaq responded with force. His messages were relentless, packed with copied comparisons between the Bible and another religious book, memes, and long paragraphs sourced from the internet. He flooded the conversation with contradictions and counterclaims, often ignoring our replies and sending more content. It felt less like a conversation and more like a broadcast. But even in the chaos, we saw a man searching, curiosity cloaked in confrontation, pain hidden behind provocation.

At one point, he accidentally sent a voice note, just a few seconds of background noise and his breath catching mid-sentence before he deleted it. It wasn't meant for us, but it revealed something raw: a real person, not just a wall of arguments. That moment reminded us that behind the sarcasm and skepticism was someone longing to be heard.

We prayed for Mwaffaq constantly. His tone tested our patience, but love steadied our response. We didn't retaliate. We didn't perform. We simply shared the Gospel; one truth at a time. The character of God. The mystery of the Trinity. The incarnation of Christ. The reliability of Scripture. The message of grace. The hope of eternal life. The Godly nature of Jesus and the meaning of His work.

Some questions were repeated. Some were sincere. But slowly, something shifted. Mwaffaq's tone softened. His words grew more reflective. He began to ask, not to trap, but to understand. One day, he wrote: "My friend, I don't earn anything from my posts or writings... but O Lord, if only I could win a human heart." It was a moment of disarming honesty. A crack in the armor. A glimpse of longing.

Later, he asked if he could post our conversation publicly. We declined gently. We explained that this wasn't about traffic or spectacle. It was about truth, and truth doesn't need applause. He understood. And then, unexpectedly, he admitted: "This conversation challenged me more than I expected. You didn't just argue, you listened. You helped me see something I had never seen before."

Mwaffaq confessed that most of his ideas about Christianity had come from biased sources, sarcasm, and misinformation. For the first time, he began to consider that maybe, just maybe, there was more to Christ than he had allowed himself to believe. He didn't convert. He didn't declare certainty. But he paused. He reconsidered. He allowed space for possibility.

And that was enough. A possibility. A fragile, trembling opening in a heart long armored by cynicism, now daring to hope.

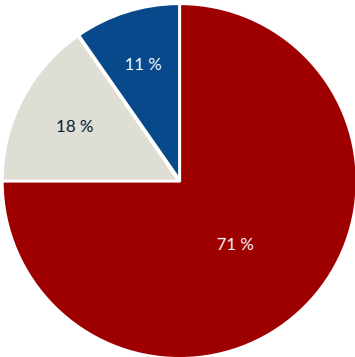

Mwaffaq's story is still unfolding. His transformation is quiet, almost imperceptible to the outside world, but deeply profound. He is no longer standing at the gates of belief as an enemy or skeptic. He is stepping closer, asking, questioning, and allowing space for something greater than himself.
